Hi Padma - as discussed below, RPL has not hired a new General Manager yet. However, it continues to consider its future options, as previously described. Among other future scenarios, RPL has preliminarily determined that it can continue to operate its units as coal-fired units and satisfy all regulatory requirements if it installs control technologies such as dry sorbent injection, powdered activated carbon, and continues to operate its ROFA/Rotamix system and exhaust through its baghouse. In light of this preliminary determination, RPL has an interest in re-starting the dormant negotiations with EPA. Along those lines, RPL intends to propose to settle this matter with EPA based on accepting annual caps on NOx, SO2, and PM emissions. Such proposed caps could ensure that appropriate controls are implemented and would allow continued operation of RPL and thereby preserve a very important municipal employer, energy supplier, and contributor to electric supply reliability. Of course, since RPL is a municipally-owned utility, any final proposal or settlement would need to be approved by the City Council, which serves as the RPL Board. We are drafting a proposal along these lines, and will forward it to you for review in the next few days. In the meantime, if you have any thoughts or wish to discuss, please let me know. Thank you. Tony.

Tony - since we haven't heard from you in a while, I thought I'd check on the status of RPL hiring a new general manager. Thanks. - Padma
